TO-DAY IN HISTORY.

BLACK FRIDAY—SEPTEMBER 24.

Black Friday is the name applied to two disastrous days in the financial history of the United States. The most important of these was the panic caused on Wall street, New York, by the efforts of Fisk and Gould to corner the gold market, gold rising to 153 1/4 on September 24, 1869. The other Black Friday occurred on September 19, 1873, in the New York Stock Exchange, which was followed by the widespread "panic of 1873."

A leading newspaper of the country, on the day following the Black Friday on Wall street, said: "Not even in the wildest days of the war excitement did gold, the barometer of the market, rise and plunge and fall as yesterday. The full list of the dead and wounded, the broken and the lamed, we shall probably not have completed until this evening. Meanwhile, the forbearance on the part of creditors is not only charity, but a duty."

The panic in gold had been coming on for several days, but no one had anticipated such a condition as actually held the market on that eventful Friday. Gold had been gradually pushed up, and every one was wondering what would be the outcome of the day. At 9 a. m. the bidding began. On the street gold was offered at 145 and was instantly snapped up. The street became intensely excited, and men grew nervous. Upward it began soaring. It remained standing at 150 for a considerable time. It was not until 11 o'clock that the monotony was broken—150% was bid. A hundred bids were shaken at each other over the little fountain, and an infernal series of yells filled the room.

To an outsider it was impossible to distinguish a bid or an offer. The "bulls" had now begun their grand charge. They swept the "bears" before them like chaff. From 150% the metal suddenly jumped to 157 1/2. This was unprecedented. Men began to rave and shriek like mad dogs. They rushed about the little fountain in paroxysms of fury. Within fifteen minutes the premium was forced up to 162 1/2, and still going up. Eventually selling began, and the crash came.

This extraordinary spectacle nearly silenced the operators. In a few words they accused some unknown person of attempting to assassinate him. "He is after me now with a knife," shrieked Speyer. "Look, look!" he exclaimed. "Don't you see the knife?" As it was evident he was crazed, he was placed in a carriage by his friends and sent home.

Mr. Speyer was not the only one made momentarily crazy. Several of the members of the board afterward confessed that under the undue excitement they felt their minds giving away.

Still further down went the market, until finally the stock exchange was deserted. The full force had been spent, the battle was over, and the greatest day Wall street had or has ever seen, was brought to a close. A large number of big firms were bankrupt. Conditions were alarming. The big hotels of the city that night presented such an appearance of excitement as they had never experienced before or since. The National Guard of the State was requested to keep itself in readiness to proceed to Wall street if necessary.

This was not necessary. The full force of the conflict had been spent on Friday and the wrecked as well as the wreckers were speechless. Saturday Wall street and the stock exchange was in peace and solitude. Although the streets were crowded, but little business was transacted, and the Great Black Friday in American finances had passed into history.

On September 24, 1768, occurred the treaty of Fort Stanwix with the Indians. To-day is the birthday of John Marshall, the eminent jurist (1755); Zachary Taylor, twelfth President of the United States (1784); John C. Stevens, statesman and poet (1759); Charles Steedman, distinguished naval officer (1811); Henry W. Slocom, statesman and soldier (1827); William O. Stoddard, author (1857); and Mark A. Hanna, the Republican leader (1857). It is the date of the death of Popin, King of France (568); Samuel Butler, the author of "Hudibras" (1680).

Will Lecture on Passion Play.

Mrs. H. E. Monroe, a lecturer, writer, and educator, who has just returned from a three months' trip in Europe, during which she visited Oberammergau and witnessed the "Passion Play," will speak at the Gospel Mission, 1223 Pennsylvania avenue, describing the most striking scenes in the play, its thrilling effect upon the average audience, and how its solemn and weird rehearsal impresses the beholder with the life of Jesus Christ and his mission into this world. A special musical programme has been prepared for the occasion. Solos will be sung by Mrs. Madison Clark and Mr. W. H. Evans.

SULTAN'S JEWELS

MAY BE HELD UP

Customs Officials Watching for $500,000 Layout.

Jamalul Kiram II, Sultan of Sulu, and his $500,000 worth of jewels, expected to reach New York shortly on the steamship St. Louis, are a source of anxiety to customs officials here. The government must find out from the Sultan whether he brings the jewels for his personal adornment or with the intention of selling some of them. If he means to part with some of his collection he will have to pay 60 per cent duty on them, unless he can show that they were set in the Philippines, when they could be brought in duty free, even if for sale.

Under the law the Sultan can bring in even $500,000 worth of jewels for "personal adornment," customs officials say, because jewels to that amount would not be inappropriate to a man of his rank. Maj. Hugh L. Scott, U. S. A., former superintendent of the United States Military Academy at West Point, has been detailed by the War Department to act as the representative of the government in entertaining the Sultan. Maj. Scott will accompany him during his travels in this country. He was formerly governor of Jolo, and became well acquainted with the Sultan.

Other members of the Sultan's party are Raja Muda, his brother; Hadji Panglima Tahir, Hadji Tanglima Tahir, and Hadji Gulam. C. J. Werble, an American, will act as interpreter.

NOTES OF THE STAGE.

Washington's verdict of "Get Rich Quick Wallingford" was indorsed by the New York press so unanimously that Cohan & Harris decided yesterday to make this city the producing point for their next venture. Accordingly, the National Theatre will have for its attraction the week of October 10 a play upon which they bank heavily. "The Penalty" is one of their strongest new productions, and the fact that Washington proved lucky to "Wallingford" seems like a good omen for Cohan & Harris' next important novelty.

Charles B. Hanford and his long-time friend and manager, "Larry" Walker, have been wearing wise looks when questioned about Mr. Hanford's new production, but authentic rumor vouchers for the statement that the well-known tragedian will next take the road with Lawrence Barrett's success, "Rienzi."

Elsie Ferguson's second vehicle as a star did not apparently meet with the success awarded Channing Pollock's "Such a Little Queen." So after a week in Boston Miss Ferguson's shrewd manager, Henry B. Harris, decided that there was something the matter with "A Matter of Money." However, this resourceful manager seems to have a closet full of plays, all by American authors, ready at all times to fall back upon. Miss Ferguson is now rehearsing "The Eleventh Hour," a typically American play by Byron Ogley, and Washington will see it within a fortnight.

Mr. E. B. Etting, the jovial agent of "The Echo," which comes to the National the week after next, came into town with George Ade yesterday. Both Etting and Ade are Indiana products, graduates of Purdue.

George Cohan's new piece, which is to be produced in New York, is to be called "The Little Chauffeur."

Otis Skinner's little daughter, Cornelia, who has entered Bryn Mawr, will pay her first visit to New York next week with her mother, who used to be known on the stage as Maud Durbin.

When Bessie McCoy visits Washington the week after next it will be her first visit to the National Capital since she played a minor part in "The Spring Chicken."

Manager John Lyons, of the Academy, yesterday received a letter from his brother, Edward Lyons, business manager of the New Theater, New York, in which he predicted a big success for Materlinck's new play, "The Blue Bird," which will be produced there next Monday. Two hundred children are used in the production, and most of them have speaking parts.

GERMANS TO CELEBRATE.

Societies Will Honor Anniversary of First Settlement.

Arrangements for the holding of the 27th anniversary of the founding of Germantown, the first permanent German settlement on American soil, have been completed by the united German societies of the District of Columbia.

The celebration will take place on Monday, at Leffer's Park on the Bladensburg road.
